

Jon Ostrower
Editor-in chief
The Air Current

Jon Ostrower is Editor-in-chief of The Air Current, an in-depth reporting and analysis resource for the aviation industry. Prior to launching TAC in June 2018, Ostrower served as Aviation Editor for CNN Worldwide, guiding the network's global coverage of the business and operations of flying. Ostrower joined CNN in 2016 following four and half years at the Wall Street Journal where he covered Boeing, aviation safety and the business of global aerospace. Before that, Ostrower was editor of the award-winning FlightBlogger for Flightglobal and Flight International Magazine covering the development of the Boeing 787 Dreamliner and other new aircraft programs from 2007 to 2012. Ostrower, a Boston native, graduated from The George Washington University's School of Media and Public Affairs with a bachelor's degree in Political Communication. He is also an instructor at the University of Southern California's Aviation Safety and Security Program. He is based in Seattle.